April 12: Elite men downhill

Minnaar maximises home soil advantage

By Rob Jones in Pietermaritzburg - cyclingnews.com

The opening round of the 2009 Nissan UCI Mountain Bike World Cup concluded on Sunday with a storybook ending that couldn't have been scripted any better, as local hero Greg Minnaar (Santa Cruz Syndicate) won the downhill in front of family and friends in Pietermaritzburg, South Africa.

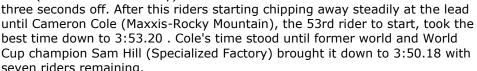

"It is a huge, huge win for me," said Minnaar. "With my family here, and all the people supporting and cheering for me it was very special to win here. In some ways it was nice that Mick [Hannah] qualified first, because that took a little pressure off. My run was very good, quite clean, with only little mistakes. I'm very happy that I was able to get this win and keep the leader's jersey."

The three-kilometre course favoured fitness as much as technical prowess, with long sections of pedalling interspersed with sharp drop-offs and jumps. Spectators came out in droves to cheer on Minnaar, pushing total attendance beyond 16,000, which far exceeded organizer's expectations.

The men's race was expected to be a real battle, and that is what happened. In qualifying, the top 10 riders went under four minutes, but in the final there were 28 who cracked that barrier.

Great Britain's Ruaridh Cunningham (Chain Reaction-Intense) was the first to do so at 3:59.12, and his time stood up until American Aaron Holmes Gwin (Yeti Fox Shox Factory) knocked

Hill's time stood up through three riders, before the legendary Steve Peat (Santa Cruz Syndicate) was the first to go under 3:50, recording 3:49.25. Australian Chris Kovarik (Chain Reaction-Intense), winner on this course the previous week was next, but crashed in a rocky section near the top, knocking effortless, as he sailed over the jumps and pedaled furiously through the flatter sections. The noise from the partisan crowd was almost deafening, and when Minnaar crossed the finish line, knocking almost six seconds off his teammate Peat's time, the cheers could be heard back up to the start line.

However there was still one rider to go - Australian Mick Hannah (GT Bicycles), who had qualified first. The spectators were quiet as Hannah came past, respectful of his skill, but quietly hoping for a South African victory. Their hopes were answered when Hannah posted a time of 3:45.69 - fast enough for second, but not fast enough to displace Minnaar.
