Volvo-Cannondale's Chausson, Lopes Win Kaprun Dual

Round seven of the Tissot-UCI Mountain Bike World Cup Downhill & Dual Series resumed racing after three weeks off, with a well-attended and fast-action dual event in Kaprun. Anne-Caroline Chausson (FRA, Volvo-Cannondale) and Brian Lopes (USA, Volvo-Cannondale) both have a virtual lock on the overall series championships, but didn't rest for a moment on their way to another pair of wins in the eight-race series.

Flanked by thousands of enthusiastic spectators and great weather conditions, the two Volvo-Cannondale downhillers worked their way through strong fields to take the win on the weekend's Saturday evening. Set on a grassy hillside adjacent to the downhill course finish and full of high-speed jumps and tight bermed turns, this week's dual course let riders choose... either go all-out or crash out.

And that's exactly what happened in the men's final, as Lopes and yet another Volvo-Cannondale rider - Cédric Gracia (FRA) - went head-to-head in the single-run, winner take all dual.

Brian Lopes - USA

The brackets had set the two friends and teammates on a collision course for the finals, where they were even into the first hard left-hand turn when Gracia hit a course pole and lost some time. But he made it up and was again side-by-side with Lopes coming down a steep slope into a fast and grassy right-hand turn - and that's where the Frenchman lost it. He slid out on the inside and flew across the track, as Lopes cruised to an easy victory and win.

Gracia had earned his place in the final by beating such talents as GT riders Eric Carter (USA, Team GT) and Steve Peat (GBR, Team GT) in the semi and quarter final rounds. Lopes had a tough bracket as well, beating World Champion Wade Bootes (AUS, Trek-Volkswagen) and British riders Scott Beaumont (Kona/Ford Focus) and Nigel Page (Upstart Team).

With his sixth win in seven tries, Lopes has the series tied up now, with 315 points. The runner-up of this round is also the runner-up overall, as Gracia holds the #2 spot with 161 points.

In consolation racing, Bootes beat Eric Carter to capture third place in the men's round, while Stieger beat Donovan to settle the women's round.
